Misha, the Atelier Diffuso meets Paola Lenti in “DIALOGUES”

Echoes of distant cultures become moving scenographies

Misha meets Paola Lenti for an exclusive collaboration. Two design excellences, both deeply rooted in a strong manufacturing vocation, come together once again to create a series of scenographic installations in the form of rotating panels, enriching the spaces of the Paola Lenti flagship store in Milan during Milan Design Week 2026.

A refined dialogue between artisanal knowledge

Paola Lenti entrusts Misha with a series of fragments originating from distant imaginaries, inviting the Atelier Diffuso to reinterpret and recompose them in its own way. Japan and India, textile research and manual gesture, memory and vision merge into a distinctive and unrepeatable form of craftsmanship.

This collaboration enhances Misha's very nature: a boundless atelier capable of bringing together different geographies and sensibilities into a single material narrative. The panels become moving thresholds—surfaces that rotate and transform space into storytelling.

Sayaki

A decorative fragment—the embroidered lace of an antique hat veil—reaches Misha like a quiet note. The Atelier Diffuso entrusts it to the hands of Indian embroiderers, who reinterpret it using silk threads on natural fiber. The design becomes essential and airy, shaped by pauses and breaths.

Hand embroidery introduces a subtle vibration: light glides over the silk, settles, then withdraws. The result is a light, deeply contemporary mark, as if carrying a thought in motion across the panel, while the material tells a story of precision and delicacy.

Ibuki

In Ibuki, the origin lies in a Japanese decorative detail discovered by Paola Lenti. Misha observes and deconstructs it: flowers transform into points that spread across the surface, forming an ordered pattern that evokes a vegetal constellation.

Indian embroidery builds an irregular grid of small flowers that seem to emerge and recede, as if the surface were breathing. Ibuki embodies the rhythm of nature—a restrained landscape where floral memory becomes an abstract sign, and the panel turns into a visual score.

Misha

Wall coverings as a refined bridge between distant cultures

Misha was born from a deep love for craftsmanship and the belief that walls, too, can tell stories. The atelier works side by side with exceptional artisans and artists who reinterpret ancient Eastern painting and embroidery techniques through a contemporary lens.

Through this dialogue between cultures, traditions, and imagination, Misha creates timeless wall coverings, the result of years of research, artistic exploration, and collaborations with prestigious partners such as Hermès, Dior, Cartier, Pomellato, Van Cleef & Arpels, Dimore Studio, Paola Lenti, Forte Forte, and Barovier & Toso.

Each Misha wall covering begins as a drawing and takes shape through hours of meticulous hand painting, layer after layer, until the surface becomes a poetic landscape of color, texture, and light. This couture process gives each panel its own soul, capable of enveloping spaces with depth and emotion.

More than decoration, Misha creates atmospheres—worlds that invite us to pause, dream, and escape the rhythm of everyday life.
